A GIANT ADVENTURE

If you're running a campaign or an adventure built upon the shoulders of giants, take advantage of these titanic monsters, features, items, spells, and player options to create a truly massive roleplaying experience.

On the GM's side of the screen, check out the following sections:

- Major Offenders. Bring a unique feel to underused giants from the SRD.
- Instant Stronghold. Quickly create a fortress of giant proportions.
- Giant Familiars. Intensify the sense of scale with giant pets.

For players in a game about giants, the following sections offer even more options:

- Cyclops-Kin. A new player race all about living large, but always outside normal society.

- Circle of Behemoths. A giant-themed druid subclass.
- Big Trouble. Options for small folk to topple titans.

MAJOR OFFENDERS

The SRD contains ten giants: cloud giant, ettin, fire giant, frost giant, hill giant, ogre, oni, stone giant, storm giant, and troll. Let's review some of their best features:

- Cloud and storm giants are notable for innate magical abilities. The oni can also cast spells in addition to changing their shape and regenerating lost hit points.
- The troll has a Regenerate feature (and a Perception-boosting Keen Smell that is more situational), though their aversion to fire and acid damage is so well-known these days that trolls rarely heal from fights with experienced adventurers.

- The stone giant has Stone Camouflage, which is ideal for alpine ambushes, and a Rock Catching reaction that, on its face, seems perhaps more suited for encounters with other giants than with humanoid PCs.
- The ettin's two heads make them resilient to many conditions and difficult to sneak up on, though tricking the heads into arguing with each other is always a satisfying conclusion to an ettin encounter.

These are standout giants, but the rest are less mechanically distinct. All that differentiate the fire giant, frost giant, hill giant, and ogre from each other are ability scores and derived statistics (and in the case of fire and frost giants, immunities to fire and cold damage respectively).

LET YOUR ACTIONS DO THE TALKING

So now we know who our big offenders are. The next step is to rehabilitate the fire giant, frost giant, hill giant, and ogre with unique features and actions. Let's give each of these underdeveloped giants a special feature and an action that recharges on a d6 result to make them distinct and memorable.

FIRE GIANTS

While many fire giants focus on large-scale craftsmanship and war armaments, some of their kind lean into their elemental origins. Try these features to play up fiery themes.

SPECIAL FEATURE

Firewalk. For every 10 feet of movement spent, the fire giant leaves two campfire-sized fiery footprints in 5-foot square spaces diagonal to each other. The footprints blaze for 1 minute and give off dim light in a 10-foot radius. These effects end if the fire is extinguished. Any creature that starts its turn in or adjacent to a fiery footprint takes 11 (2d10) fire damage.

ACTION

Tremor Wave (Recharge 5–6). The fire giant smashes the ground before it, summoning molten earth to the surface in a searing, tectonic wave. Each creature in a 30-foot cube originating from the fire giant must make a DC 14 Dexterity saving throw. On a failed save, a creature takes 11 (2d10) bludgeoning and 11 (2d10) fire damage and is knocked prone and pushed back 10 feet. On a successful save, a creature takes half damage and isn't knocked prone.

FROST GIANTS

Encountering a frost giant should instill blood-chilling fear in an adventurer, yet nothing they do telegraphs wintry power. Apply the following features to frost giant stat blocks to reinforce how cool it is to fight a frost giant.

SPECIAL FEATURE

Bitterfrost Cyclone (1/Day). As an action, the frost giant whips up a bone-chilling cyclone that swirls around it for up to 10 minutes. The cyclone generates and repositions up to 3 feet of snow in a 15-foot radius that moves with the frost giant, creating difficult terrain for Large and smaller creatures. Additionally, the cyclone protects the frost giant from projectiles. All but the heaviest ranged weapon attacks targeting the frost giant are made at disadvantage. If the frost giant takes damage, it must make a concentration check to maintain the cyclone. Otherwise, the cyclone lasts for the duration, until the frost giant is incapacitated, or until it spends a bonus action to end the effect.

ACTION

Winter's Breath (Recharge 5–6). The frost giant expels a puff of skin-numbing breath. Each creature in a 40-foot cone originating from the frost giant must make a DC 16 Constitution saving throw. On a failure, a creature takes 22 (4d10) cold damage and its movement speed is reduced by half. On a success, a creature takes half damage and its speed is not reduced. If a creature rolls a natural 1 on its saving throw, it is restrained in ice, escape DC 16 Strength.

HILL GIANTS

Hill giants generally lead cruelly simple lives. While a well-fed hill giant is a witless fool with a low intellect, it still knows how to throw its weight around. Apply the following features to hill giant stat blocks to keep the encounter rolling.

SPECIAL FEATURE

Rebound. When the hill giant is knocked prone, roll a d6. On an even result, the hill giant bounces up to half its movement in the opposite direction of the last attack that hit it and lands prone in the nearest unoccupied space. This effect does not trigger attacks of opportunity.

ACTIONS

Boulderous Slam (Recharge 5–6). The hill giant throws itself through the air, colliding with whatever is in its path. The hill giant moves up to 20 feet in a straight line and can move through the space of any Large or smaller creature. The first time it enters a target's space during this move, that target must make a DC 15 Strength saving throw. On a failure, a target takes 22 (4d10) bludgeoning damage and is knocked prone. On a success, a creature takes half the damage and isn't knocked prone. This action deals twice as much damage to structures that aren't made of solid stone.

OGRES

Ogres are always hungry, and their oversized appetites are a driving force in their decision-making. Apply the following features to an ogre stat block to give players an encounter to chew on.

SPECIAL FEATURE

Big Appetite. The ogre can use its bonus action to eat part of a Medium or Small dead creature or up to 30 pounds of food in one big gulp. When it does so, it gains 10 temporary hit points that last for 1 minute. Additionally, it immediately recharges its Thunderous Belch action.

ACTION

Thunderous Belch (Recharge 6). The ogre rips an ear-ringing burp that carries all the foul odor of its last meal. Each creature in a 20-foot cube originating from the ogre must make a DC 13 Constitution saving throw. On a failed save, a creature takes 11 (2d10) thunder damage and is poisoned until the end of its next turn, sickened by the gross belch.

INSTANT STRONGHOLD

Looking to whip up a quick, giant-filled fortress and stock it with something neat? Need a good place to hide your MacGuffin until your heroes are ready to go get it? Did you spice up your world map with a line like, "Here there be giants," and now you need to back that up?

Throw together a unique stronghold with these one-roll tables to keep PCs occupied as they take on monsters four times their size!

Just roll a d4 (Stronghold Size table), d6 (Regional Complications table), d8 (Occupants table), d10 (Location table), d12 (Unique Treasure table), and a d20 (Unique Feature table). Use the results on the appropriate tables to create a stronghold all your own. You can also use the entries as idea springboards for your own creations.

STRONGHOLD SIZE

d4 Description

- 1 A giant's hovel. Roll 1d4 to determine how many rooms the residents have to work with. You determine room size (but typically each room is four or five times as large as the resident giant).
- 2 Average for a country giant, small for an organized clan. Roll 1d6 + 1 to determine the number of rooms in the stronghold.
- 3 Comfortable for smaller giants and those in smaller communes. Roll 1d10 + 2 to determine the number of rooms in the stronghold.
- 4 Expansive. The envy of giants everywhere else. Roll 1d12 + 3 and 1d4 + 1 to determine the number of smaller rooms and larger communal spaces, respectively.

REGIONAL COMPLICATIONS

d6 Description

- 1 The giants demand tribute from everyone around.
- 2 The giants like to "borrow" cattle and other livestock.
- 3 Resident giants mean giant pets. What do they feed their pets to make them so big?
- 4 It seems every other season, at least two clans of giants go to war. Those caught in the crossfire have it the worst.
- 5 Giants that make their livings on waterways or reside deep within the sea's embrace.
- 6 Giant yodeling frequently shatters glass windows, undermines foundations, frightens livestock, and causes rockslides.

OCCUPANTS

d8 Description

- 1 Fiery, ill-tempered giantkin.
- 2 The cousins of giants: trolls, ettins, and ogres.
- 3 The cave-dwellers of the giant world.
- 4 Spooky giants that dabble in magic, the void, and extraplanar esoterica.
- 5 Giants that make their livings on waterways or reside deep within the sea's embrace.
- 6 Frigid giantkin with cold shoulders and harsh manners.
- 7 The forest-dwellers of the giant world.
- 8 Giants who wander wastelands, lord over badlands, and stride amid desert dunes.

LOCATION

d10 Description

- 1 Mountainside caves.
- 2 Deep beneath the surface.
- 3 Up in the clouds.
- 4 Nestled in the hills.
- 5 On the coast, either in grotto caves or within massive, hollow shells.
- 6 In someone else's stronghold.
- 7 Amid the bones of even larger ancestors.
- 8 A village overtaken by war.
- 9 An extraplanar residence.
- 10 Beneath the boughs of colossal trees.

UNIQUE TREASURE

d12 Description

- 1 A hoard of gold and gilded weapons. They're as greedy as dragons, these giants.
- 2 Sheep with golden fleece or geese that lay platinum eggs.
- 3 Fruit that grants incredible strength to whomever eats it, guarded jealously.
- 4 The secret recipes of the gods, held in solemn oath for ages unending.
- 5 Wondrous ore, from which the giants craft impenetrable armor, fortifications, and the sharpest weapons and tools. The giants sell this ore, but only at the highest of prices.
- 6 The souls of the dead, contained in vessels crafted from the finger bones of their fallen.
- 7 Beans that contain the power to keep you awake against all odds. They are highly coveted by gnomes.
- 8 The magical weapon prophesied to slay a dark lord, a must-have for any heroic aspirant.
- 9 An arcane or divine secret, held with cult-like devotion.
- 10 An oasis font, from which everlasting youth flows.
- 11 A heavily guarded community that thrives not by might, but by togetherness and inclusion.
- 12 The most terrible of creatures, caged beneath chain, lock, and key. But does the cruel thing's very influence corrupt the giants and the surrounding area?

UNIQUE FEATURE

d20 Description

- 1 Everything here is a shade of green, and the giants are frequently, inexplicably sick.
- 2 The giants here are related to the region's local ruler.
- 3 The stronghold contains a vast library.
- 4 Fortifications are twice as resilient as can be reasonably expected.
- 5 The whole stronghold and the inhabitants within are an illusion.
- 6 All of the denizens are albino.
- 7 A rainbow shines from the center of the stronghold every seventh day at dawn.
- 8 Smaller folk live in harmony with the giants, exchanging goods and services for protection.
- 9 The giants specialize in training giant beasts, using them as familiars, beasts of burden, transportation, or implements of war.
- 10 A black market is hosted here every full moon. Because of the giants' demeanor, it is the only venue that can be trusted.
- 11 Giants here are especially superstitious and observe the Old Ways of doing things.
- 12 A complex network of air tubes and messenger ways connect all the areas of the stronghold.
- 13 All the doors are sentient and enjoy riddles and jokes.
- 14 This stronghold produces a prized trade good found nowhere else in the world.
- 15 Giants here practice self-study and reflection, walking the paths of monks and ascetics.
- 16 These giants are dedicated warmongers, riling up other residents of the area to fight among themselves.
- 17 The stronghold was only recently founded. Much of it is still under construction.
- 18 The area is haunted, but the giants don't mind.
- 19 Aberrant beasts and ferocious monstrosities populate the immediate region.
- 20 The weather in the area is always agitated.

GIANT FAMILIARS

Humanoids and Giants agree, pets are pretty great. Whether it's a housecat or a stronghold puma (both named Mr. Boots of course), a prized pig or a ghost boar, cultivating relationships with beasts is fulfilling no matter the size of your footprint.

For mages of all sorts, developing bonds with familiars is beneficial and widely practiced. Yet, we hardly ever see giant mages with familiars. Let's fix that.

GIANT SPELLCASTERS

Our first big step towards giving exceptionally large spellslingers pets to command in battle is to determine which giants could feasibly use a spell like find familiar (since none of them actually have that spell on their spell lists). For our purposes, we are excluding giants who have innate spellcasting. Their magic is inherent, not through study or practice.

A quick search through the SRD and Kobold Press's own published works yields just two creatures of the giant subtype who are also spellcasters: the void giant (see Creature Codex) and the cave giant shaman (see Tome of Beasts 2). Not even a proper ogre mage to be found in the bunch. So before we go any further, let's get an ogre mage on the board.

Ogre Mage

Large giant, neutral evil

ARMOR CLASS 11 (14 with mage armor)

HIT POINTS 114 (12d12 + 36)

SPEED 40 ft. (60 ft. fly with fly)

STR	DEX	CON	INT	WIS	CHA
19 (+4)	10 (+0)	16 (+3)	16 (+3)	9 (–1)	7 (–2)

SAVING THROWS Dex +3, Int +6

SKILLS Arcana +6, Perception +2

SENSES darkvision 60 ft., passive Perception 12

LANGUAGES Common, Giant

CHALLENGE 6 (2,300 XP) Proficiency Bonus +3

Spellcasting. The ogre mage is an 8th-level spellcaster. Its spellcasting ability is Intelligence (save DC 14, +6 to hit with spell attacks). The ogre mage has the following wizard spells prepared:

At will: firebolt (2d10), mage hand, message, shocking grasp (2d8)

1st level (4 slots): burning hands, mage armor, magic missile, grease

2nd level (3 slots): misty step, shatter, web

3rd level (3 slots): counterspell, fly, lightning bolt

4th level (2 slots): wall of fire

ACTIONS

Multiattack. The ogre mage makes two clubstaff attacks or one clubstaff attack and then casts a cantrip.

Clubstaff. Melee Weapon Attack: +7 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 13 (2d8 + 4) bludgeoning damage.

THE TINY PROBLEM WITH FIND FAMILIAR

Now that we know who our giant spellcasters are, we come to the not-so-little critters that serve them. We need to reset some rules, because Large and Huge size mages deserve proportionately sized familiars, yet find familiar doesn't let you have anything bigger than an octopus as written. The cleanest way to update the spell is to give find familiar the following "At Higher Levels" addendum:

At Higher Levels. When you cast find familiar using a spell slot higher than 1st level, the CR of available creatures to choose from increases by 1 for each spell slot above 2nd. Your familiar's CR cannot exceed half of your own caster level. Additionally, you cannot cast find familiar as a ritual for the purpose of gaining the service of a higher CR creature.

For an easier encounter, don't have giant familiars use their attack actions. If you want the encounter to be tougher, let giant familiars take actions as normal.

Of course, you also need to swap in the find familiar spell on your magical giant's spell list. Or maybe they have a secret tome of deeper magic than what a typical giant might know.

ON-THEME FAMILIARS

So we have our wizardly giants and our patched familiar finding spell. But what animals would ogre mages, void giants, and cave giant shamans even want to serve them?

Here are a few suggestions, as well as the Special Trait a giant spellcaster would get while keeping one of these familiars in their service, in addition to all the benefits conferred by the find familiar spell.

GIANT BADGER

Burly, tenacious, and mean. Giant spellcasters find a lot to appreciate here.

A giant spellcaster with a giant badger gets the Bloodied Rage trait, granting them advantage on melee attacks and resistance to bludgeoning, slashing, and piercing damage when they are reduced to half their hit points. Additionally, all attacks made against them have advantage. This effect lasts for 1 minute or until their hit points drop to zero. Afterward, they gain 1 level of exhaustion.

Consider giving this trait to your giant badgers as well. Other iterations of the game have given badgers a rage feature, and the current SRD stat block could use a little something special.

GIANT BOAR

A prized pig is nothing to snort at. They also make comfy pillows for giants to snuggle.

A giant spellcaster gains their giant boar's Relentless trait. Additionally, a giant boar's giant master takes on a porcine appearance, growing impressive tusks that it can use in place of its standard melee weapon attack to deal $2d6 + \text{Strength modifier}$ piercing damage.

GIANT CRAB

Giant crabs are favored by cave giant shamans and void giants alike, for different reasons. The former appreciate their companionship in underground rivers and lakes, while the latter recognizes the eldritch qualities inherent in crabs.

A giant spellcaster gains their giant crab's Amphibious trait and a swim speed equal to their movement speed.

GIANT GOAT

All giants love goats. They love them as pets, food, livestock, and trade goods. A giant goat familiar is sure to be beleaguered by any other nearby giant that isn't its master. Fortunately, giant goats are feisty.

A giant spellcaster gains their giant goat's Sure-Footed trait. Additionally, every time they make a melee weapon attack, the targeted creature must succeed on a DC 13 Strength saving throw or be knocked prone.

Using the giant goat's modifier here saves you some math but if you want to use your giant spellcaster's own DC, add 8 to the attack bonus of their melee attack action.

GIANT SPIDER

A favorite familiar for cave giant shamans and ogre mages, giant spiders have a delightful creep factor. Their webs can create all sorts of scenarios for clever mages to exploit.

A giant spellcaster gains their giant spider's Spider Climb and Web Walker traits, allowing them to safely traverse a sticky lair.

GIANT VULTURE

Giant vultures are fragile, but they get along well with ogre mages and void giants, sharing a bent toward cruelty and malice.

A giant spellcaster gains their giant vulture's Pack Tactics and Keen Sight and Smell traits.

GIANT GAME BREAKS

Is this game breaking? Probably. But so is the Deck of Many Things or giving every character a magic weapon that bypasses damage resistances of creatures within the first and second tier of play. That doesn't stop any of us from playing with these toys and having our fun. So roll with it, or at least keep this behind the GM's screen.

CYCLOPS-KIN

Feast your eye on this new player option, the cyclops-kin player race. Superbly burly with a withering gaze, the cyclops-kin is a new opportunity to play out your next fantasy adventure from the single-eyed perspective.

OFFSPRING OF TITANS

Cyclops-kin trace their lineage back to cyclopean titans of antiquity. With bloodlines diluted through generations of existence, these uncomplicated giants still retain much of the strength and resilience of their forebears, though their prodigious size has diminished. Ancient primordial power still runs through their veins, however, allowing cyclops-kin to manifest rays of arcane force from their singular eyes.

BRIDGING THE CULTURAL DIVIDE

Cyclops-kin are more social creatures than the monstrous cyclopes. While their predecessors lead solitary, simple lives, cyclops-kin are more willing to associate with humans, orcs, and other folk who afford them the space to coexist.

Because of their relative size, cyclops-kin frequently take it upon themselves to assume protector and guardian roles in humanoid societies. When not filling social roles suited for their bulk and brawn, cyclops-kin demonstrate talents in husbandry. Their shepherding traditions date back to their progenitors, and all cyclops-kin display skill in mastering beasts, especially those of the four-legged varieties such as sheep, cattle, and bison.

With cyclopes and other giants standing larger and most humanoids small and fragile by comparison, cyclops-kin suffer from exclusion and imposed solitude.

A need to “fit in” can be a driving force at the best of times, spurring cyclops-kin to prove their worth to others and to themselves. At their worst, cyclops-kin who fail to find their place grow insular, irrational, and cruel, taking out frustrations on whomever they perceive to be responsible for their misfortunes.

SCRAPPY BUT UNSOPHISTICATED

An angered cyclops-kin is fearsome. With their natural proclivity for feats of strength, a cyclops-kin might well grab anything in arm’s reach and throw it with deadly force. Ever resourceful, cyclops-kin can put their brawn behind any assault, whether with a greatclub or a handcart.

Offsetting a cyclops-kin’s physical prowess is their inherent shortsightedness, resulting in a clumsy streak. And when their poor eyesight can’t be exploited, crafty foes might prey upon a cyclops-kin’s proclivity for simple joys and trusting natures. Most cyclops-kin carry a childlike wonder well into adulthood.

CYCLOPS-KIN NAMES

Cyclops-kin typically name themselves for at least one of three reasons. Some want to honor their ancestry by choosing names of predecessors or legendary characters of myth and legend, believing that growing into one’s name is a worthy aspiration. Many seek to fit in, trusting that familiar and local-sounding names help in normalizing their atypically large presence. Plenty of other cyclops-kin settle with uncomplicated names that are monosyllabic, hoping that a simple name will help them appear more approachable and likable.

CYCLOPS-KIN TRAITS

Your cyclops-kin character has certain characteristics in common with all other cyclops-kin.

Ability Score Increase. Your Strength score increases by 2, and your Constitution or Wisdom score increases by 1.

Age. Cyclops-kin reach maturity around the age of 20, though many never let go of the curiosity and naivety of their youth. While stories exist of cyclops living for centuries due to their supernatural origins, most cyclops-kin appear to live around 80 years.

Alignment. Gentle giants and cruel titans exist in equal measure. Cyclops-kin vary in alignment and are as willing to abide by their local society’s laws as they are to break them.

Size. You are Large size. Cyclops-kin average between 7 and 11 feet tall and typically weigh around 350 lbs.

Speed. You have a base speed of 30 feet.

Type. You are of the Giant type.

Giant Strength. You are considered proficient with improvised weapons and deal an extra die of damage when making weapon attacks with one. Additionally, you ignore the two-handed weapon property and treat all weapons without the heavy property as if they had the thrown property.

Poor Depth Perception. You have disadvantage on attack rolls against targets more than 30 feet away.

Powerful Build. You count as one size larger when determining your carrying capacity and the weight you can push, drag, or lift.

Shepherd's Knack. You have proficiency in the Animal Handling skill. Additionally, you have advantage on Charisma and Wisdom checks involving cows, sheep, and other four-legged livestock animals.

Titan's Gaze. Tapping into your primordial heritage, you can emit a ray of eldritch power from your singular eye. When you use this feature, all targets in a 5-foot by 30-foot line originating from you must make a Strength saving throw. The DC of this saving throw is 8 + your Constitution modifier + your proficiency bonus. A target takes 2d6 force damage on a failed save and is knocked prone, or half as much damage on a successful save and is not knocked prone.

The damage increases to 3d6 at 6th level, 4d6 at 11th level, and 5d6 at 16th level. At 10th level you deal double damage to objects and structures with Titan's Gaze. After you use Titan's Gaze, you cannot use it again until you complete a short or long rest.

Languages. You know Common and Giant.

CIRCLE OF BEHEMOTHS

Do you wish to crush the bones of your enemies into flour for your bread? Do you want to shake the ground with heavy footfalls and rattle windows with your uttered breaths? Live your big dreams with this giant-themed subclass for druids!

Druids of the Circle of Behemoths venerate the largest of creatures, embodying the adage of "might makes right." These druids have no qualms with occupying space, being the loudest in a crowd, or earning their place through shows of force.

Whether playing the role of a gentle giant and protecting small creatures who cannot protect themselves, or challenging apex predators on equal footing, goodly druids of this circle take it upon themselves to fill the spaces in nature that humanoids create as byproducts of civilization and advancement.

At the other end of the spectrum are druids who see it as their privilege and right to lord their size and strength over others.

THE GIANT IN THE ROOM

Giants are Huge, and that size difference compared to more standard characters makes fair play tricky (see further guidance in Midgard Heroes Handbook, in the Centaur Size and Damage section). How do we justify a Large character without impinging on everyone else's fun?

Rather than create a whole backbone of rules for oversized weapons and such, rely on the cyclops-kin's singular penalty feature Poor Depth Perception to rationalize keeping their damage output in line with what everyone else is capable of.

Meanwhile, more neutrally-inclined Circle of Behemoths druids seek for all things to grow in peace unfettered, even waging war to achieve that peace for others.

CIRCLE SPELLS

Your affinity for the gigantic grants you access to a selection of extra spells when you reach certain levels in this class, as shown on the Circle of Behemoths Spells table.

Once you gain access to one of these spells, you always have it prepared and it doesn't count against the number of spells you can prepare each day. If you gain access to a spell that doesn't appear on the druid spell list, the spell is nonetheless a druid spell for you.

CIRCLE OF BEHEMOTHS SPELLS

Druid Level	Spells
3rd	enlarge/reduce, gust of wind
5th	conjure animals*, plant growth
7th	giant insect, polymorph*
9th	arcane hand, hold monster

*only beasts with "giant" in their name

BEHEMOTH SHAPE

Starting at 2nd level, you learn how to expand your physical horizons. You can use a bonus action to expend one use of your Wild Shape to grow in size. You retain your shape, but become larger, with exaggerated features as befits a behemoth.

While in behemoth shape, you retain your game statistics but you increase in physical proportions and mass, occupying more space than before. You choose whether your equipment falls to the ground around you or expands along with your new size. Worn equipment functions as normal, but the GM decides whether it is practical for you to effectively use any equipment or items with proficiency or accuracy in your new size.

Your behemoth shape lasts for 10 minutes or until you dismiss it (no action required), are incapacitated, die, or use this feature again. Additionally, you cannot cast spells while in behemoth shape.

You gain the following benefits while in your behemoth shape:

- Your size category increases by one step, such as from Small to Medium or Medium to Large.
- You gain advantage on Strength and Constitution checks and saving throws.
- You gain a Slam natural weapon that you are proficient in. This attack deals 1d6 + your Strength modifier bludgeoning damage.
- You can expend a spell slot to empower your next weapon attack, doubling the damage dice rolled on a hit with a simple or natural weapon you are proficient in, such as your Slam.

VOICE OF THUNDER

At 2nd level you gain proficiency in the Giant language if you do not already know it. Additionally, creatures within 10 feet of you who hear you speak verbal components to spells in the Giant language must make a Constitution saving throw against your spell save DC or be deafened until the end of their next turn.

IMPROVED BEHEMOTH SHAPE

At 6th level, your control over your behemoth shape improves. While in behemoth shape, you deal max damage to structures and objects. In addition, the damage you deal with your Slam while in behemoth shape increases to 1d8 and further increases to 1d10 at 10th level, and 1d12 at 14th level.

WALK OF THE GIANTS

At 10th level, you imbue a select few of your circle spells with gigantic power. When you cast enlarge/reduce with a spell slot of 3rd level or higher, you can target an additional creature for every spell slot above 2nd level.

Additionally, when you cast conjure animals, you can expend an additional spell slot at the same time to affect the animals you conjure with an enlarge/reduce spell. When you do so, the duration of conjure animals is reduced to just 1 minute with concentration.

TITANIC SHAPE

At 14th level you have fully mastered your behemoth shape and can grow into an enormous, earthshaking titan. When you use your Wild Shape feature, you can grow up to two size categories larger, such as Small to Large or Medium to Huge.

Additionally, as an action, you can perform a Tremor Stomp that reduces all cover within 10 feet by one step, such as full cover to three-quarters or partial cover to none. All creatures within 10 feet must make a Strength saving throw against your spell save DC or take 4d12 bludgeoning damage and be knocked prone. A creature who succeeds on its saving throw takes only half damage and is not prone.

You can only perform a Tremor Stomp once per use of your Wild Shape feature.

BIG TROUBLE

Remember in previous editions, dwarves and gnomes had bonuses when facing giant creatures? Wouldn't it be cool to bring some of that old magic back?

These class features, weapon options, and spells let you do just that, empowering small folk in your giant-centric campaigns to tap into the behemoth-slaying powers of old.

NEW FIGHTING STYLES

While dwarves and gnomes pioneered tactics for dealing with creatures many times their size, these fighting styles are not just limited to smaller folk.

Fighters, paladins, and rangers of all sizes who practice these fighting styles can maneuver around the battlefield, evading huge hazards and making takedowns a literal phenomenon.

FLEET FIGHTING

You have resistance to bludgeoning, slashing, and piercing damage dealt to you by opportunity attacks. Additionally, when you are adjacent to a creature at least one size category larger than you, you may use your bonus action to use the Dodge action.

HEAVY FELLING

When you impose the prone condition on a creature through an attack, skill contest, or spell effect, the target takes 1d6 falling damage if they are Small or Medium, 2d6 if they are Large, 4d6 if they are Huge, or 8d6 if they are Gargantuan.

NEW WEAPON OPTIONS

Introduced in the Midgard Heroes Handbook and expanded in Tome of Heroes, weapon options add flair to tabletop war.

As with all weapon options, these require a character using them to have proficiency with their weapon. If an option requires an ability check or saving throw, the DC equals 8 + the attacker's proficiency bonus + the attacker's Strength or Dexterity modifier (attacker's choice).

COVER CRUSHER

Prerequisite: Greatclub, Maul, or Warhammer

As an action, you can make an attack against a feature of the terrain or environment that is providing cover, emulating a giant's own propensity for destruction as you clear a way. For every 10 damage you deal in your attack, reduce the cover granted by one step from full cover to three-quarters cover to partial cover to no cover. If your weapon is non-magical, you must roll a d20. On a 1, your weapon is destroyed in the process.

BORROWING FROM OTHER GAMES

Dwarves and gnomes in the 3.5 D&D ruleset gained a whopping +4 dodge bonus to their AC when facing creatures of the Giant subtype. In that era of the game, AC could get above 30!

These days, a +4 AC bonus, even against just one monster subtype, would destabilize the balance of 5E gameplay. When you try to translate effects between editions or even different games, look at the intent of the original design and emulate the spirit of it, rather than bringing numbers straight across.

LADDER SHOT

Prerequisite: Shortbow or Longbow

As an action, you can launch a bevy of arrows into a vertical surface or a Large or bigger creature that is not prone, creating climbing handholds. You may make a number of attack rolls equal to your proficiency bonus + 1 against your target's AC, dealing only 1 piercing damage for each success, shallowly embedding arrows in your target in a staggered pattern. An embedded arrow grants advantage on one Athletics check to climb or grapple the surface it is attached to. Arrows harmlessly dislodge after you use or interact with them. This option requires, expends, and destroys however much ammunition was used in its attempt. At least one arrow must embed to grant this benefit.

PLUNGING PIERCER

Prerequisite: Longsword or Greatsword

When you attack with this weapon and you fall more than 10 feet, you can curl yourself around its hilt, transferring your momentum into a deadly strike. Make an attack roll with this weapon. On a hit, calculate any falling damage you would have taken and add that amount to your weapon's damage roll against your target. You take only half the falling damage dealt, or none if your attack was a critical hit. If your attack fails, you take falling damage normally.

NEW SPELLS

Clever mages know that size does, in fact, matter. Often, a giant's worst enemy is a very bad fall. Use the following spells to bring your foes low before your arcane might.

MAGE WEIGHT

Transmutation Cantrip

CASTING TIME: 1 action

RANGE: 60 feet

COMPONENTS: V, S

DURATION: Concentration, up to 1 minute

Waves of energy pulsate from your outstretched hand, distorting the space they pass through. Choose one creature within range. It must make a Constitution saving throw. On a failure, you adjust its size category by one step up or down (your choice) for the duration and the target is unable to take the Dash action. For instance, you could make a Medium creature operate under rules constraints for a Small or Large creature. You do not alter the creature's physical appearance or the space it occupies, only what size category it operates under.

RAZE THE FORTRESS

2nd-Level Evocation

CASTING TIME: 1 action

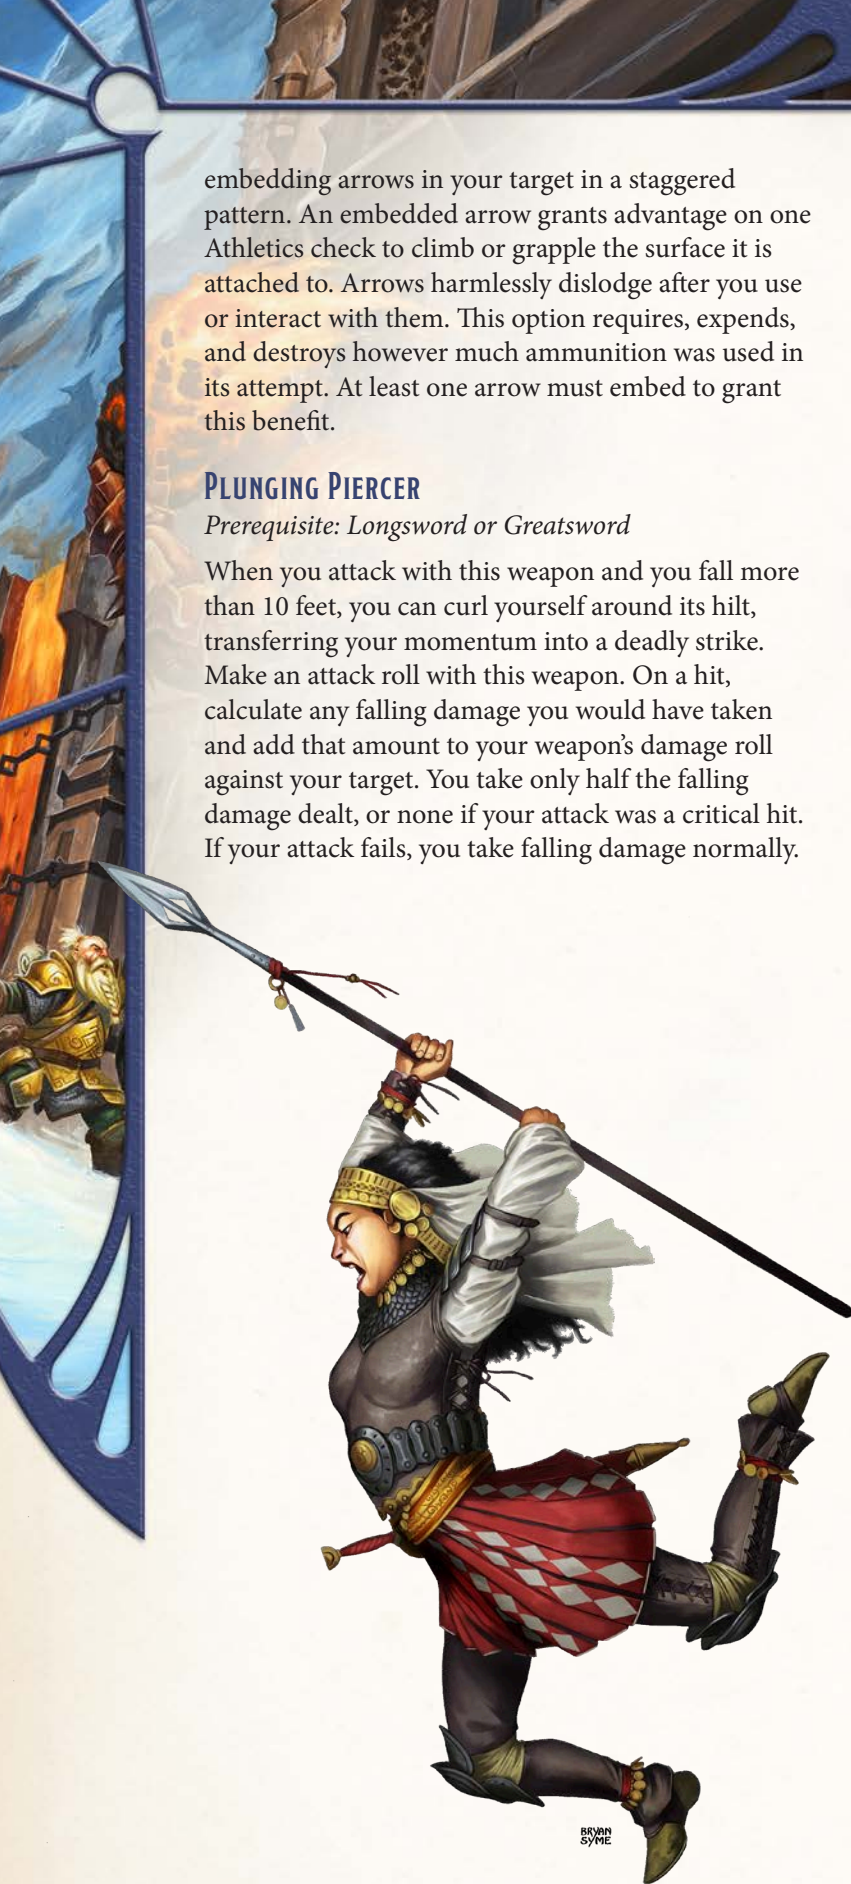

RANGE: 30 feet

COMPONENTS: V, S, M (a pinch of rubble dust or a few slivers of wood from a destroyed building)

DURATION: Instantaneous, then concentration up to 1 minute

You assail your target with eldritch, agility-sapping missiles. Choose one creature within range that you can see. It must make a Dexterity saving throw. On a failure, the target takes 4d6 force damage and its AC is reduced for the duration by the number of the highest rolled damage dice. On a success, the target takes only half damage and their AC is unaffected.

At Higher Levels. When you cast this spell using a spell slot of 2nd level or higher, you can target an additional creature for each slot level above 1st.
